The relationship

Future Power Capital and Crunchbase operate in complementary areas of the private capital ecosystem. Future Power Capital brings private capital, investor relationships and access to investment opportunities across emerging companies, technology, real estate and other private-market sectors. Crunchbase provides extensive private-market data, company intelligence and predictive insights that support investors in identifying opportunities, evaluating companies and monitoring market developments.

A strategic relationship could create a strong framework for investment sourcing, market intelligence and deal flow. Future Power Capital could contribute capital relationships, investment opportunities and access to relevant investors, while Crunchbase could provide data-driven intelligence to help identify emerging companies, funding activity and potential investment opportunities more efficiently.

Over the long term, the relationship could develop through shared deal flow, data-driven investment research, investor connectivity and selected strategic or co-investment opportunities. This would allow both organizations to strengthen their position within the private markets while creating a practical and mutually beneficial relationship.

Areas of collaboration

- Company and funding intelligence
