SERVICES — VENTURE CAPITAL

Equity participation in growth-stage companies

Our venture capital activity backs earlier-stage, growth-oriented businesses through direct equity participation, taken with a clear thesis about how the business can create value over time.

Where venture capital fits

Venture Capital sits at the earlier end of the growth-financing spectrum we operate across. It is aimed at businesses whose model is still being proven, where the risk profile is higher and the potential for value creation is tied to that stage of development.

How this differs from our other activities

	Venture Capital	Development Capital	Private Equity
Business stage	Early, often pre-profit	Established, profitable or near-profitable	Mature, often larger scale
Typical stake	Minority, higher risk	Minority growth stake	Majority or full buyout
Control implications	Board seat, light governance	Board input, management retains control	Often full operational control

These are general distinctions, not fixed rules. Every situation is assessed on its own facts.

How we evaluate an opportunity

We look at the strength of the founding team, the clarity of the model being tested, and whether our involvement — capital and, where relevant, advisory support — can meaningfully improve the company's odds. We take a board seat or comparable light governance role where appropriate, in keeping with an early-stage risk profile.

Our approach

Because we invest as principal, decisions are made under our own governance without needing sign-off from external limited partners. That allows us to move at the pace a founder-led conversation requires, while still applying the same discipline we bring to every commitment.

Founders and companies seeking venture capital should use the Apply For Funding process on our website; this document does not itself constitute an offer of investment.
