SERVICES — WEALTH MANAGEMENT

Patient capital, a small number of asset classes we understand

We think about wealth the way we think about our own capital: patiently, across a small number of asset classes we actually understand, and with governance that doesn't bend under pressure. This is how we approach it, and how we work with anyone who entrusts a mandate to us.

Our investment philosophy

Our approach is built around a small number of principles we apply consistently rather than a wide menu of products. We favour asset classes where we can form our own view, hold positions for the time they need to mature, and govern decisions the same way whether the capital is our own or held on a mandate.

Asset classes we cover

We work across the asset classes that overlap with our own areas of activity — equity participations, development and growth capital, real estate, and a limited set of alternative structures — rather than attempting to cover every category available in public markets.

How we think about risk

Every asset class we cover carries real risk, including the risk of loss. We manage that by keeping positions understandable, sizing them deliberately, and avoiding concentration in any single situation.

Time horizon

We are built around patient capital. Our positions are generally not held for near-term liquidity, and we size our commitments accordingly.

How we accompany a mandate

Where we work alongside a mandate, we apply the same governance and reasoning we use for our own capital: clear documentation, a defined process, and consistent standards regardless of whose capital is involved.

What this is not

- Not a retail product. We don't market a standardised investment product to the general public.
- Not high-frequency trading. We don't chase short-term price movements or promise fast returns.
- Not a guarantee. Every asset class we cover carries real risk, including the risk of loss.
